REMINISCENCE OF ST. ALBANS RAID

Truman Lawrence of St. Albans has idded a valuable reminiscence of the St. Albans raid of October 19, 1864. The story, as told a representative of The Messenger, relates principally to the capture of a Confederate raider in Waerloo, Que, by Mr. Lawrence. This was address next year. the first captured of a raider. Mr. Lawrence was employed by the vermont Central Raifrond Co, as hage

At about a o'clack of the morning llowing the raid, October 20, Mr. Lawnce saw a man ride a gray horse into Waterloo and hitch the same under a carried a new saddle, both suspicious der, of Watertown, Conn., a torner circumstances. Lawrence walked into the rear of the ceach and, placing his hand on the raider's shoulder, said. "You are my prisquer." The raider asked. "What for?" Mr. Lawrence replied, "I'll tell you later," and reaching down, drew two long pictols from the prisoner's belt and laid them on a car seat. He then took a bowie knife from its sheath and laid it with the pistols. Unbuttoning the prisoner's vest he found beneath the belt and inside the vest, a handkerchief wrapped about a sum of money. There your old and costly methods and utilage—and some gold pieces. The total amount was $1,752.50.

Mr. Lawrence arranged for another man to take his place on the train while cleanest, and most effective that no he took the prisoner to the hotel and argument is necessary. We are ready kept him until the local officer arrived, when the prisoner was turned over along with the money and weapons. The day following he was taken to Montreal where about nine other captured raiders were taken for a trial.

A very singular coincidence, and one which shows how small the world really is, occurred May 2, 1893. Mr. Lawrence was staying for a time at a hotel in Green Cover Springs, Fla., kept by L. S. and J. L. Scot, who were also proprie-tors of the Franklin house at Highgate Springe for many years. Mr. Lawrence was in quest of relief from rheumatism from which he was suffering. One day, while in conversation with another man at the hotel he chanced to remark that he was a Vermonter and was from St. Albans. Two women were seated near by, and later one of them approached Lawrence and asked if she heard Carpets thoroughly cleaned aright that he was from St. Albans, as they lay on the floor.
